GOV. MURPHY ACTS TO SETTLE STRIKE

NEW DEAL ASKS BILLION FOR FARMERS CONCILIATOR SAYS

COUNTY REFUSES TO VOTE MONEY FOR APPRAISAL

No Appropriation Made To Pay For Action Deemed Necessary By Davey

ESTIMATES UP $10,000

New Construction To Force Expenditures Higher

County commissioners' appropriations for 1937 include no funds for appraisal of real estate. The commissioners' appropriation for 1937, announced Thursday by Auditor Forrest Short, totals $355,342.20 as compared to $345,247 in 1936. The auditor explained the increase in figures is due largely to funds added to the account for new construction and improvements on county buildings. Although Pickaway county, like other Ohio counties, faces a reappraisal of real estate in 1937 as a result of Gov. Davey's vetoing the Kirkpatrick bill, the commissioners, auditor and treasurer are opposed to a reappraisal.

Amounts Ordinary
The appropriations made by the board include only $2,400 for appraising personal and real property during the year. These amounts are those ordinarily set up each year to take care of required appraisals.

Officials contend a reappraisal would make little change in duplicate valuations and would cost the county about $14,000. The last appraisal was in 1925. In 1931 a ten per cent cut was made on the 1925 figures. Under present laws the auditor is required to make reappraisals every six years.

More For Building
Last year the commissioners had only $2,400 in their fund for construction of new county buildings and improvements. This year they allotted $28,353.05 to the fund and reductions were made in some other departments.

Appropriations include: county commissioners, $11,215.80, general office expenses $2,550, courthouse and jail $38,953.05, county home $9,960, justices and mayor's courts $950, charity $18,700, soldier's burial $1,200, agriculture $2,000, and miscellaneous county expenses $18,314.94 making a total of $104,473.79 in the commissioners department. Others were: auditor's office, $11,860, including the $2,400 for appraisals, Board of Elections, $9,170.65, treasurer $6,730, recorder, $2,800, prosecuting attorney, $9,950, court of appeals, $400, common pleas court $12,220, probate court $6,090, juvenile court $2,300, clerk of courts $3,695, coroner (Continued on Page Eight.)

TURKS THREATEN TO TAKE FRENCH SYRIAN DISTRICT

PARIS, January 7.—(UP)—The government has ordered its army command in Syria to prevent any possible Turkish incursion into the Alexandria district of Syria, which Turkey has demanded, the foreign office said today.

A spokesman said that France had 30,000 white and colonial troops in Syria. "Our force is larger than the public generally believes," the spokesman added. "It is large enough to deal with any eventuality. But we do not expect the occasion to arise." The sudden hint of possible trouble on the Turkish frontier of Syria caused officials to divert their attention from the dangerous situation in Spain.

AKRON'S MANY MOTORISTS HIT BY NEW STRIFE

AKRON, O., Jan. 7.—(UP)—Thousands of motorists in this city of 270,000 walked or rode buses today as a gasoline attendants' strike kept closed all but six of the city's 700 stations.

Hugh D. Friel, labor department conciliator, seemed confident of settling a wage dispute between gas truck drivers and distributors. Such a settlement, it was thought, would end the walk-out of attendants, now in the third day of a sympathy strike.

BOSTON, Jan. 7.—(UP)—Franklin D. Roosevelt Jr., convalescent son of the president, will leave Phillips house of Massachusetts General hospital at 11 a. m. tomorrow after six weeks' confinement with a sinus infection. Physicians today said the Harvard senior was completely recovered. Young Roosevelt plans to go to Washington, and possibly later to travel to Florida.

WALLACE TAKES PLACE AS NO. 1 MONEY SPENDER

Soil Conservation Payments To Require 500 Millions Of New Appropriations

NEW 'AG' RECORD SET

Money Sought To Pass Funds And Army And Navy

WASHINGTON, Jan. 7.—(UP)—Budget estimates prepared by President Roosevelt for transmission tomorrow to congress will show Secretary of Agriculture Henry A. Wallace as a No. 1 New Deal spender, official sources revealed today.

Detailed estimates for the 1938 fiscal year beginning next July 1 were carefully guarded, but reliable sources said total estimated expenditures will approximate $1,250,000,000 a new record for the department of agriculture.

Over Navy and Army
This is more than the expected total for navy and war department expenditures in the current fiscal year, and approximately $200,000,000 more than Wallace will spend this year. Expanded activities of the agriculture department account for the increase.

The Resettlement Administration was added to the department of agriculture after the 1938 budget estimates were prepared and will not be included in Wallace's estimates of his needs. It will depend on an emergency appropriation. Wallace and his aides will confer with W. W. Alexander, resettlement administrator, later this month on RA requirements. Because of an expected shift in RA activities no accurate estimate is yet possible.

Officials said, however, that $200,000,000 would be a "good guess" as to the amount which RA will need in 1938 for relief and rural rehabilitation. It will require at least $50,000,000 for care of 250,000 farmers transferred from the Works Progress Administration for the remainder of this fiscal year.

Tenants to Get Help
Another item which the budget will not show will be funds for aid of tenant farmers. A presidential committee is studying legislative proposals to be transmitted soon to Mr. Roosevelt. Sen. John Bankhead, D., Ala., said he would propose appropriations of $50,000,000 annually for 10 years to aid farmers to buy their own land.

President Roosevelt's crop insurance committee recently recommended a program for federal insurance of wheat yields beginning in 1938. If congress approves the program as initial appropriation of $100,000,000 as a "working fund" probably will be necessary.

A special drought committee, headed by Morris L. Cooke, has prepared recommendations which, if adopted by congress, probably would call for expenditure of several million dollars in emergency funds by Wallace for rehabilitation of drought farmers and the building of dams and reservoirs.

The largest single item in the budget will be for continuation of benefit payments under the soil conservation act. The act, passed last year after invalidation of the old AAA, provides for an annual appropriation of $300,000,000.

EDUCATORS NEED $6,679

A resolution appropriating $6,679 for salaries of employees, supplies, equipment and expense of members during 1937 was adopted by the Board of Education Wednesday night. The appropriation is the same as last year. Funds for the support of the county school offices are all received from the State Department of Education and are obtained through the liquid fuel, use and sale taxes.

TAX COMMISSION TO BE CHANGED IN HOUSE PLAN

COLUMBUS, Jan. 7.—(UP)—The administration's drive to avert new taxes by diverting a larger share of revenues to the state's coffers was under way today with the introduction in the house of four administration-sponsored bills.

The bills, introduced yesterday prior to adjournment until next Monday when the legislators will participate in Gov. Martin L. Davey's second inaugural, provided for a drastic reorganization of the state tax commission, an increase in the state's share of the automobile license tag revenues, payment of liquor law enforcement costs out of liquor permit funds and a definite appropriation from the liquor rotary fund for state liquor department expenses.

The police department was instructed by the mayor to arrest any child seen breaking globes. Police Chief William McCrady added an additional warning to the mayor's statement on air guns. It is against the law to shoot them in the city limits.

CONCILIATOR SAYS SITUATION HOPEFUL

Ex-Mayor Of Detroit Talks With Knudsen Of General Motors In Morning

THREE QUESTIONS FACED

Executives Report 51,803 Men Out Of Work

DETROIT, Jan. 7.—(UP)—Gov. Frank Murphy took personal charge today of negotiations between General Motors executives and union leaders in an attempt to settle a strike involving 54,100 automobile employees.

After a hurried conference with William S. Knudsen, executive vice president of General Motors, Murphy went across the street to the Fisher building. At the same time Homer Martin, head of the union, and his strategy board arrived at the Fisher building. It was the nearest thing to direct negotiation that has occurred since the strikes started.

Hopeful Says Dewey
"The situation looks hopeful," said James F. Dewey, department of labor conciliator, as he and Murphy left Knudsen's office and went to the Fisher building.

A tunnel runs under the street from the building in which Knudsen's office is located to the Fisher building. Murphy worked rapidly with his negotiations because he is scheduled to return to Lansing to address the Michigan legislature in mid-afternoon.

Dewey spent yesterday and the early part of last night traveling between Knudsen's office and union headquarters, but never succeeded in getting Martin and the General Motors official together. Three issues were said to be predominant:

1. Whether the union would agree to withdraw sit-down strikers from plants in Flint, Mich., and Anderson, Ind.
2. Whether General Motors would agree not to resume production in any plant occupied by sit-down strikers until the strike is settled.
3. Whether the union would be willing to start negotiations with the understanding that it would speak only for its own members and not for all of General Motors employees.

51,803 Out of Jobs
After the conference between Knudsen and Murphy, General Motors issued a recapitulation of the strike situation, estimating there were 51,803 men out of work.

ITALY WILLING TO TAKE TROOPS OUT OF SPAIN

ROME, Jan. 7.—(UP)—Italy, in a memorandum to the French and British governments, offered today to withdraw all support from the nationalists in the Spanish civil war provided that other nations withdrew all support of the loyalists, it was said authoritatively.

The note was delivered last night, in memorandum form, and was expected to be published tonight. The memorandum was in reply to a French-British note urging the cessation of the dispatch of volunteers to Spain. Italy's reply was as expected an acceptance in non-intervention in principle but with reservations that would necessitate long negotiation to make non-intervention effective.

FORMER KINGS MEET

VIENNA, Jan. 7.—(UP)—Edward VIII, Duke of Windsor, and Alfonso XIII, former king of Spain, lunched together today at a Vienna hotel and conversed at length, reminiscing on their lives since they left their thrones.

Judge Denounced

THREATENED with injunction by the United Automobile Workers union, Circuit Judge Edward D. Black of Flint, Mich., answered the threat by challenging the union to "come late court." Black issued an injunction ordering cessation of sit-down strikers in a plant at Flint of Fisher Body Co., subsidiary of General Motors corporation. The union, with Homer S. Martin, president, acting as spokesman, based its injunction threat on the report Judge Black had given General Motors stockholders. Black said he would "like" to see the union challenge the injunction. The union said: "The disclosure of Judge Black's statement is most shocking and, in any event, Judge Black is guilty of the unethical conduct."

MATTSON DENIES BOY RELEASED BY HIS CAPTOR

TACOMA, Wash., Jan. 7.—(UP)—There were now signs of cheerfulness and relaxation of tension at the home of Dr. William W. Mattson today, but he denied his had heard from the bearded man who kidnapped his 10-year-old son, Charles, 11 days ago.

The physician, who had appealed to local police and federal men to let nothing block his chances of negotiating with the kidnaper, returned from a mysterious four-hour trip and announced:

"I have had no word from the kidnaper. My boy is not home." Rumors were widespread that Dr. Mattson had paid $28,000 to the man who signed himself "Tim" in a note left in the Mattsons' Puget Sound home when Charles, scantily clad, was seized and taken away.

"I can't comment on that," the doctor said. "A report that the ransom money was taken into the woods was misinterpreted."

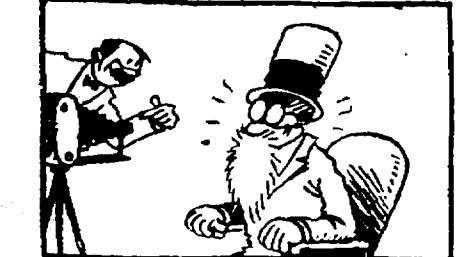

Mrs. Mattson, remaining home to be near five telephones installed should the kidnaper attempt to contact the family by that method, appeared more cheerful than at any time since her son disappeared. But she, too, was reluctant to discuss the case.

Asked if Charles had returned home, she said, "I can't say anything about that."

CURLEY FAVORED FOR ISLE POST ONCE MURPHY'S

PRELIMINARY SEWAGE PLANT SURVEY TO BE DRAFTED EARLY IN FEBRUARY.

ENGINEER SEEKS FEDERAL GRANT OVER $61,363

Browne Interviewing City's Factory Managers About Major Project

OTHER BUSINESS HANDLED

Appropriation Ordinance to be Voted Friday Eve

Councilmen adopted a resolution Wednesday night authorizing the service director to file an application through the Federal Emergency Administration of Public Works for a grant to aid in financing the construction of a municipal sewage treatment works.

Floyd G. Browne, of Marion, sanitary engineer employed by the city to conduct surveys and work out preliminary details for the plant, is to furnish the information the government wishes. A resolution adopted by council several weeks ago authorizing an application for a grant was repealed as council termed it "inadequate." It was passed previous to the employment of an engineer and named city officials to furnish information to the government.

To Speed Plans

Mr. Browne announced Wednesday night he plans to have preliminary surveys for the disposal plant completed early in February. At present he is interviewing officials of local industrial plants.

Mr. Browne said the application, entirely a preliminary matter as no definite figures can be established at this time, will ask a federal grant of $61,363 figured on a 45 per cent basis with the city's share $75,000.

The absence of Councilmen Frank Baker and Frank Marion from the Wednesday night session prevented passage of an appropriation ordinance for the first six months of 1937. Mr. Marion was unable to attend the meeting because of some work necessary at the Jackson township school. Mr. Baker is on the sick list.

Meet Again Friday

The ordinance will be considered at an adjourned session to be held Friday at 7:30 p. m. Councilmen were informed the figures were tentative and will be considered further at the adjourned session.

A representative of a Chicago and St. Louis bonding firm, that had a survey conducted of the property of the Ohio Water Service Co., here, is expected here the latter part of the week to discuss the survey report with councilmen.

Carl C. Leist, city solicitor, informed councilmen he had received a letter from the Pennsylvania railroad concerning additional protection at crossings. The company reported the crossing protection had been investigated and was found satisfactory at the present time.

One room on the third floor of the addition will be equipped as an art room.

Five classrooms will be located on the second and third floors. The present high school building has the appearance of a two-story building because of the low first floor. The new addition will be three stories above ground on the Corwin street side. Floors in both of the old buildings are on the same level. There will be a Corwin street entrance.

ARMS EMBARGO ACTION RUSHED BY CONGRESS

BUDGET MESSAGE NEXT

Another Deficit Expected
In Next Fiscal Year

WASHINGTON, Jan. 7.—(UP)—President Roosevelt's challenge to the United States Supreme Court to follow the election returns placed on congress today responsibility for dealing with national social and economic problems without constitutional amendment. The president said there was no vital need to change the constitution.

New Deal Legislators, meanwhile, sought to expedite action on the Spanish arms embargo. At home labor trouble became more acute hourly and seemed headed, ultimately, toward presidential intervention. The west coast shipping strike was deadlocked and the controversy between General Motors Corp. and the United Automobile Workers was spreading.

The arms embargo, snapped through congress yesterday at Mr. Roosevelt's request, faced temporary delay in becoming effective because of a parliamentary technicality.

Budget Speech Completed
Mr. Roosevelt completed his annual budget message. He will meet with newspaper reporters today to explain it preliminary to submission to congress tomorrow. It is expected to call for upwards of $500,000,000 to tide the government over this fiscal year and forecast another deficit in the next fiscal period.

The resolution embargoing export of munitions to Spain awaits signature by Vice President Garner before going to the White House. Under senate rules such resolutions must wait one day before being signed. The senate neglected in yesterday's hurry to authorize Garner to ignore that rule and sign today when the senate is not in session.

Attaches said it might be possible to complete action on the bill anyway and send it to the White House today. Much of the need for haste was ended when a Spanish freighter sailed yesterday from New York partly loaded with munitions for the Spanish loyalists. No other cargo is scheduled to depart today although additional arms export licenses are outstanding and will remain valid until the embargo resolution becomes effective.

If Mr. Roosevelt makes the expected forecast of another treasury deficit tomorrow, it will be the eighth consecutive instance in which the nation has been unable to pay its way.

Depression At End

The president's annual message delivered in person yesterday before a joint session of congress intimated that the depression had ended and recovery was here. Under those circumstances an end of deficits is indicated during the second Roosevelt administration which will begin January 20 when the president is inaugurated in an outdoor ceremony on the steps of the capital.

Congress now turns to enactment of the second New Deal legislative program.

You're Telling Me!

AUNT LAZY DUMBKOPF has just arrived for her annual visit over the holidays. She's a bit late, but will make up for that by staying a month longer.

Her nephew, Zadok, is convinced now that the depression is not only far from over but has just begun, Aunt Lazy being one of the leading knife and fork acrobats west of the Appalachians.

Aunt Lazy loves to eat so much that once she petitioned the governor to declare every other Thursday Thanksgiving day with plenty of Christmas dinners sprinkled in between.

That's why Aunt Lazy never got married. She couldn't make up her mind whether to marry a grocer or a meat market operator. Zadok once remarked that she should have married a baker or some fellow with lots of dough.

This made Aunt Lazy angry and she disinherited Zadok for the time being. She made up a brand new will saying she would not bequeath to Zadok any oil wells or gilt-edged bonds.

Her move was really a great relief to Zadok, who had been worrying over how he could get out of paying inheritance taxes on an inheritance which did not exist. Aunt Lazy's oil well and bonds being chiefly a state of mind.

However, Aunt Lazy soon got hungry again. So she tore up the will, made Zadok her heir again and started hitch hiking toward his dinner table. Her timing was perfect — she arrived three minutes before dinner time.

OPERA SINGER, GOLFER TO BE ON CROSBY HOUR

Edgar Bergen, Paul
Whiteman Appear
with Vallee

Grete Stueckgold, who proudly tells everyone that she was the first opera star to sing a duet with Bing Crosby, is coming back to the Music Hall tonight. Bing also presents Lawson Little, famous golfer, as another of his guests in this broadcast over the NBC red network at 10 P.M.

It started a lot of comment among critics and listeners when Bing gave Grete a lesson in crooning during her first appearance in the Music Hall. Then they sang a duet. Now the blonde Swedish star of the Metropolitan comes back for her fourth guest appearance with Bing and two of them are planning to do some more singing together. Ever Bob Burns wants to get in on it this time.

Bergen-Whiteman

Radio has a new comedian who is definitely a hit. His name is Edgar Bergen and he returns to Rudy Vallee's Hour for the fourth successive week tonight. Other guests on this broadcast over the NBC red network at 8 p. m. (EST) are Bert Lahr, longtime comedy favorite of Broadway and the microphone; Ellsworth Vines and Fred Perry, leading pro tennis stars; and Paul Whiteman, who will be guest conductor of Rudy's orchestra for one number.

An impressive production of "All Points West," new song drama by Rodgers and Hart, has arranged for this show. Whiteman will conduct the orchestra and a dramatic cast will be selected for the piece.

DONAHEY LOSES FIGHT TO KEEP ALEXANDER JOB

WASHINGTON, Jan. 7.—(UP)—Senator A. V. Donahey of Ohio today lost his fight to prevent retirement of William Alexander of Columbus, U. S. weather bureau observer for the last 40 years.

Sen. Donahey wrote President Roosevelt, asking that Alexander be permitted to continue in his position despite the fact that he has reached the retirement age of 70. The request was referred to the department of agriculture.

Secretary Wallace told Sen. Donahey it was a rule of the department to retire on pension all weather bureau chiefs when they become eligible. He said no exception could be made in the case of Alexander.

FOUR CRASHES IN THE AIR

WITHIN a period of two weeks four passenger airplanes have crashed in widely separated parts of the country, three of them bringing death to every soul on board. The steady growth of the popularity of airplane travel has not in the past been retarded by the occasional tragedies that have marked its progress and it is unlikely that such an effect will be produced by the most recent disasters. Nevertheless, the loss of four ships and a score of lives in a brief period of time should prove thought-provoking for operators and for those who travel by air.

So far there has been no official determination of the causes of these tragedies. It is probable that each will be traced to a different set of circumstances, in part of which the weather will be found conspicuous as a factor. Mechanical deficiencies or failure of the human element also will have played their part.

Possibly the whole truth will not be revealed by a study of the wreckage found with the bodies of passengers in mountain passes, but enough in the way of enlightening evidence may be shown to throw some light on the causes of these tragedies. Perhaps there is an unwarranted defiance of adverse weather conditions for the sake of maintaining schedules. If so, the rule of safety first should be established and scrupulously obeyed.

EVERYONE WALKS

THERE is food for interesting thought in the fact that, while we write and speak of pedestrians as though they were a class apart, they actually are not. Indeed, we may be thankful that in America the word "cavalier," which once used to describe the horseback-riding as distinguished from the walking classes, has found no such modern counterpart as "automobilier" or "gasolinier."

The heat with which we argue the rights and duties of the pedestrian and the motorist easily might persuade the proverbial visitor from Mars that here were two hostile classes on the point of flying at each other's throats. There is no subject on which we as a nation more readily become indignant. In fact, if it were not for the saving circumstance that the American pedestrian at any moment may step into a motor car and become an "automobilier," or the other way around, almost any slushy day really would provide all the provocation needed for a bloody insurrection.

We may be thankful that in America, at least, pedestrianism is alternately an art and a vice, but never, never a badge of class distinction.

It isn't marriage that fails. Courtship would fail, too, if both parties let themselves look sloppy.

World At A Glance

As the date (Jan. 20) for the inaugural ceremonies approaches it becomes more and more evident that President Roosevelt cannot afford to let his inauguration ceremonies even if he tries.

By all reasonable calculations a worse time of year for an outdoor show (mainly out of doors) hardly could have been chosen.

The president himself opposed much of a celebration, probably feeling that the weather was likely to be bad and fearing a consequently poor turnout, which naturally would be bad publicity for him. The procession will be far less spectacular than usual. The price of seats in the spectators' stands will be higher than ever before. Their occupants may suffer miserably from the cold, perhaps plus snow or a shivering rain. There will be no inaugural ball.

THOUSANDS COMING

Very chilly water, in short, has been thrown on the whole affair.

Nevertheless, however, are that a large crowd will be unprepared. Hotels and boarding houses are looking up to their bath-tubs and up in corridors.

CIANO BEING GROOMED

ROME—For years the big question mark concerning Italy has been: After Mussolini, what? Who will take his place? Can anyone take his place? He has built up the most amazing governmental structure in the world. Will it fall like a pack of cards when Il Duce departs for the Fascist hereafter?

Mussolini has made the choice of his successor doubly difficult by exiling to obscure position every man who crowded him for the limelight.

But now it looks as if one man had come along upon whom Il Duce has bestowed the dictatorial blessing. He is Count Galeazzo Ciano, Minister of Foreign Affairs and what is more important, husband of Edda Mussolini.

LITTLE MUSSOLINI

Ciano is a born actor, and his acting consists chiefly of imitating his papa-in-law. Italy is full of Little Mussolinis—ambitious Fascists who ape Il Duce—but Count Ciano is the best mimic of the lot. He can roll his eyes, blow out his cheeks, pucker his lips exactly like Mussolini. He even struts around with his thumbs in the top of his pants—the village blacksmith pose so frequent with Il Duce.

Not long ago Ciano tried a balcony speech at Florence a la Mussolini. His facial expressions were perfect, but just as he was rumbling out one of Il Duce's most stentorian perorations, his voice squeaked. There were audible titters from the crowd below.

On the whole, however, Ciano does pretty well. He is aided by having his father-in-law's piercing eyes, his full face, and his heavy jaw—though his skin looks as soft as thistledown, whereas Mussolini's is like black sandpaper.

Ciano has something which Mussolini lacks—a sense of propriety in his play-acting. Il Duce struts and storms before foreign visitors as he does before cheering Fascists, and the strangers don't like it. But with foreigners Ciano is pleasant, frank, forthright, saves the theatricals for the local peasantry.

BORN DRAMATIST

When Ciano was just out of college he became dramatic critic of a Roman paper, wrote a play himself which was produced. Mussolini, then a great devotee of the theatre, saw it and liked it.

Ciano had an early yen for diplomacy, first became secretary of the Italian Embassy in Rio de Janeiro. After he married Mussolini's daughter, promotion came faster. He was sent to Shanghai as consul general, where he conceived and inaugurated an express steamship service between Italy and the Orient.

This was the first deed of young Ciano's which indicated that, outside of a lucky marriage, he had something on the ball.

People back in Rome opposed the Orient steamship service, argued that large ships could not pay because of exorbitant tolls collected by the Suez Canal. Ciano argued that British steamers were so poor that new Italian vessels could capture all the trade.

He finally won out, and proved to be right. The new Italian liners have given the staid old British lines a serious jolt.

F.D.R.'S VIEWS DISREGARDED

And all this in response to what amounted to an appeal from the White House for a "quiet inauguration!"

It is fair to say that the inaugural committee, headed by Admiral Cary T. Grayson, did not endorse the plan to make the re-inauguration a quiet affair. Neither did local business men, particularly hotel and restaurant managers. The committee has done its utmost to disregard the administration's hush-hush policy and advertise Washington as an ideal winter resort.

It ISN'T as cold as Greenland, but a Greenlander would be excusable for complaining the weather on a bad day along the Potomac.

DIET AND HEALTH
Brain, Functions are Discussed

IT IS SOMEWHAT appalling to think that practically all of our brain could be removed and we might go on living, but that if we lose two little masses of flesh no bigger than the end of your thumb, we would die in a very few days.

To be quite frank, I don't know of any case where the entire brain was missing (although I have often suspected it). There are very formidable obstacles in the way of proving such a hypothesis. The shock which would accompany injury to the whole brain, or surgical removal of it, would be fatal before there was an opportunity of observing the effects. But we know of cases of people who are born with one-half the brain missing; they are paralyzed on one side, but they live for years and perform ordinary functions satisfactorily. Then there are a few cases of injury which practically totally destroyed one side of the brain. If he can get along without one side, why not both? If we could just arrange to leave the motor area, speech areas and sight and hearing areas in, the rest could go and you could scarcely tell the difference in your neighbor at a dinner party.

Adrenal Bodies Important

But those two little masses of flesh, the adrenal bodies—that's a different story. They sit atop the kidneys on each side, and unless one looks carefully, he is likely not even to see them, but they are important.

When they are destroyed by tuberculosis, and when that occurs, there is a marked emaciation, weakness and prostration, ending in death unless treatment is instituted. The rapidity of development depends on how much of the gland is destroyed. But when the whole gland is removed by experimental surgery death occurs in two or three days, or even a few hours. There is great prostration, muscular weakness and marked lowering of blood pressure.

One part of the gland produces the substance, adrenalin, which regulates the blood pressure, muscular tone, and many other important functions of the body, including the supply of sugar to the blood. The whole gland swells when certain poisons or toxins enter the body, and changes known as Selye's alarm reaction occur.

There is another part of the gland which does not produce adrenalin, but some other substance. Something pretty close to that substance has been isolated by chemists—called by different names, "cortin" will do as well as any.

When the gland is diseased in a human being and this severe prostration occurs, administration of adrenalin will not save the situation. But administration of cortin frequently will. So it looks as if the vital part of the gland, the part essential to life, were the part which produces cortin. It is probable that there are islands of tissue scattered all over the body which produce adrenalin, so that part of the gland can be destroyed with impunity, but our life, liberty and happiness depend upon the small strip of cortical tissue.

Its use in the disease I have spoken of, Addison's disease, is a distinct advance. A distinguished clinician, who has seen many of these cases, says that to note the recovery after the administration is literally to see one raised from the dead.

CHAPTER 43

SELDEN appeared the only one unconcerned following the attempt to kidnap or slay the children. He called for a calm discussion of events. Keld, at Selden's side, was not so calm at the moment. The attacker had taken a shot at him.

"Take a seat, James, we must talk," Selden said as the butler entered. "Mr. Reid was telling me about his rash flight from the cottage, but you know the old saying—where duty calls—or is it beauty? Anyway, it was just as well that he was there, though he ruined all my plans." He grinned broadly at the astonished men.

"But I don't understand what is happening," Reid cried excitedly. "A murderous attack has been made on the children, and the murderer is still somewhere about, and you tell everybody to go to sleep as all danger is over. It seems madness."

Selden laid a hand on his shoulder. "You haven't yet recovered from your illness. The assassin has got right away by this time. But the main point is that the secret hiding place of the children is known, and they will have to move. By the way, James, that ladder came from the library, I suppose?"

"Yes, sir, it was used for getting books from the higher shelves; it was there this evening—I saw it."

"Look here," Reid suddenly broke in. "I'm risking something in telling you this—I was in the Abbey on the night—"

He got no further—Selden interrupted hastily.

"My dear fellow, I know. Don't you remember that you told me about it, and I chaffed you about your romantic escapade?" Reid stared at the level eyes of the detective and read a warning.

James laughed. "That was the time you knocked me down."

"I wonder, James, whether you would mind getting us something to drink. I'm sure Reid wants one badly."

"Why, certainly, sir." He rose and went out.

"Why did you stop me?" Reid said, facing the other with intense determination. He had intended to tell the whole truth, and take the consequences.

"My dear Jack," Selden said in a singularly gentle voice, "while you were lying delirious, there was no one to look after you, and I did not want a stranger there. Shall I go now?"

Reid breathed hard; he rested his head on his hands, and his gaze was fixed on the table. "Please do."

"I heard you raving in your delirium, and I felt it wasn't safe to have anyone else with you, so I constituted myself nurse at nights. You were all right in the day."

Reid looked up and met the other's eyes. He saw the dark rings and the strained look, and realized what an awful time Selden must have passed through with this heavy weight of responsibility. Tears came to his own eyes—he was sick weak.

"You were a brick, Selden; you must have heard something."

"If I did, I have forgotten. There is no need to refer again to it unless some day you care to tell me. As far as I am concerned it is sealed up."

His mouth twisted into a smile. "But if a certain young lady I know had heard your opinion of her she would have been flattered."

To hide his confusion, Reid remarked, "That was why you sent James out of the room."

"There was no need for him to hear, but keep your ears open when he comes back."

James came in, apologizing for the delay. He had been compelled to go to the servants' quarters and pacify the maids, who had been scared by the noise. He poured out drinks and Selden insisted on his joining them.

"Mrs. Thornton, the housekeeper, has gone to Lady Severing. She insisted on my unlocking the communication door for her. She swears she knows who the murderer is and that she is going to tell her ladyship."

"Good," Selden said. "She will probably nominate you, James."

The butler did not answer, staring at the floor with a wooden face.

"She went to London a few days ago, James, didn't she?"

"Mrs. Thornton?" James gave a start. "Yes, she did, and has been making hints and insinuations ever since. I shall ask Lady Severing to dismiss her. She is a busybody and mischief-maker."

"I heartily agree. I have had some experience of her."

Reid interrupted them. "But do you think, Selden, that the murderer came in tonight by the way I mentioned?"

"I am sure he didn't. I was on guard there myself."

"There must be another way in, then. Do you think it possible that there is some secret passage, such as one reads of in books, from the crypt, and under the lake?"

Selden smiled. "When we found that the coffin there had been tampered with, after the murder of Sir Henry, I took the obvious course of examining the crypt, but with just such an idea as you had, but there is nothing of the sort. I hardly expected to find one, because if there had been one in old days the water from the lake oozing through would have caused a collapse long ago."

James gave a gesture of despair. "Then I give it up, sir; but it seems that the children are not safe anywhere in the Abbey."

"They are not, James, but we are not going to remove them to a safer place. My difficulty is that I have not been playing the game with Hutchins, for he has been searching for them, and I have been hiding them, and I couldn't tell him—that's the trouble."

"Why not?" Reid asked.

Selden's face was grim. "Because," he said, emphasizing each word, "if I had done so he would have had them protected by the police, and then there would have been no further attempts to abduct them."

Reid sprang up. "Do you mean that you were using them as a bait to catch the murderer of Sir Henry? If so, I am not going to be a party to that."

"Steady, Reid! Sit down and don't get excited. If these assassins—for I am convinced there are more than one—are determined to get hold of the children, and we have them effectually hidden, or protected, they will bide their time and sooner or later they will get the chance. Isn't it better when we are all on our guard, you and James here, and I, to see if we can't get them? I may even be called off this case. You must really be guided by me."

"But I don't see what the object is if it's the same people. Are they going to put their heads into a noose for blackmail or ransom—it sounds too absurd!"

Selden gave a quick glance at James, and saw that a struggle was going on in his mind. He spoke quietly, but every word seemed to be like the stab of a knife into flesh.

"There is no question of ransom—this is murder. Nothing short of that will satisfy these fiends. Remember, this has not been the work of a day or a month—it has been planned for years."

"But why murder? What have these children done?"

"The sins of the fathers shall be visited upon the children," Selden said solemnly. He faced round rapidly. "Am I not right, James?"

The question took the butler like a shot from a gun. He stammered and hung his head. "Sir Henry made many enemies when he was young. Excuse me, sir, I'm not easy about the children, and if you will forgive me, I'll go and see if they are all right."

"Do, James, and tell Miss Lawrence that they will be quite safe," James disappeared so quickly that it was evident he feared further questions.

"He knows something about this business, Selden," Reid declared. "The detective smiled with a slight gesture of contempt."

"He knows everything, but he won't speak; that's the difficulty. What is puzzling me is this—perhaps you can help. James does not appear to be in any personal danger, and yet he was up to the hilt in Sir Henry's confidence, and those two and Graham came back to this village together. It doesn't fit in; there's something all wrong. Now that Sir Henry is dead, and James has the money, why doesn't he speak?"

"Perhaps he is an accessory to the crime?"

"It's not so simple as all that. For tonight the children must remain where they are—it is hardly worth moving them to their old rooms at this hour, but you and I will take turns in watching, now that Hicks has deserted us."

"Of course I'll do that," Reid said heartily, feeling that the children were being used rather like an antelope chained to a tree to attract a lion.

"Tomorrow they can return to their own rooms, but they must not go outside the house—that is most important, for things are moving very swiftly."

"I wish your goodness you would tell me what it is all about?" Reid said restlessly.

Selden laid a hand on his arm reassuringly. "Believe me, there is no question of not trusting you, Jack. I haven't even told Hutchins, and yet he is working with me. I may be entirely wrong and then I should look a fool, but I am waiting for news from London which will either confirm or destroy my suspicions, and then I promise to tell you."

James returned to say that he had taken food to Sylvia and the children, and that the twins had gone back to bed, dog tired, though their adventurous little souls had been thrilled by the midnight adventure. Sylvia had accepted all these extraordinary happenings without protest or request for information. She was satisfied to trust to Reid and Selden, who were fighting for her.

"James, you had better go to bed," Selden told him. "Mr. Reid and I will be responsible for the safety of the place."

"Very good, sir, but Mrs. Thornton is still with Lady Severing, and I want to look up the door as usual."

Selden remarked: "Give me the key. I am taking the first watch, and I will lock it after she has finished her argument, or whatever it is."

The butler seemed relieved—he looked tired out. "Thank you, sir; then I will go, and one of you two gentlemen will open the door in the morning for the servants."

When James had departed, Reid turned with a puzzled look to Selden.

"You are going to lock our friend up tonight?"

"I am going to lock the door," Selden grinned.

Juliana of Holland and Prince Bernhard Marry

CROWN PRINCESS AND CONSORT

THE HAGUE, Jan. 7.—(UP)—Crown Princess Juliana, heiress to the throne of the Netherlands, married Prince Bernhard Zu Lippe-Biesterfeld today in a 15-minute civil ceremony followed by religious confirmation at the Dutch reformed church of St. James.

In taking a German consort, the Princess Juliana followed the precedent of her mother, Queen Wilhelmina, who married Prince Henry of Mecklenburg in the same church 40 years ago. He died in 1934.

Sharing the spotlight with Juliana, but not official attention, was the wedding of another Juliana in the little town of Oegstgeest, near Leyden. This Juliana Van Der Meer, a housemaid for the widow Lubbe, was born on the same day and hour as the royal Juliana, and, likewise, married at the same moment. Theirs were the only weddings in the Netherlands today.

Her presents were of the simplest compared with the silver, diamonds, lace, silks, limousine and yacht showered on the royal Juliana. They consisted of practical kitchenware, typical dutch wooden mixing spoons and a table service of stainless steel.

The royal Juliana's wedding took place in a storybook atmosphere of golden and crystal state coaches, prancing steeds, brightly uniformed cavalry escorts, and thousands and thousands of sturdy Dutch citizens who came from the far ends of Holland to stare at the royal lovers.

Unlike other weddings, in which the bride considers it bad luck to meet her bridegroom before she sees him at the altar, Juliana according to Dutch custom, met Bernhard at the great palace of the Hague, this morning.

The sat side by side in the great golden state coach and led the wedding procession from the palace to the town hall where, in the presence of the burgomaster and his assistants, they gravely affixed their signatures to the civil documents which made them man and wife.

The ceremony at the town hall was over in a few minutes and the wedding party started immediately for the church for the religious service in the ancient Calvinist edifice.

A radiantly happy bride, Juliana, in her white velvet wedding gown, her glittering tiara and

LINE CAGE CONTESTS ON PICKAWAY COUNTY'S WEEKEND SCHEDULE

WARRIORS TO PLAY BEXLEY OUTFIT AND ASHVILLE 5

Scioto at Perry Game Tops
Class "B" League Tilts
Friday Evening

GROGERS PLAY SATURDAY

Red and Black Entertainment
to Include Three Frays

Nine basketball games, enough to keep any dyed-in-the-wool fan busy, will be presented Circleville and Pickaway county court followers during the next two days.

Circleville high school engages in two of them, meeting Bexley on the C.A.C. court Friday evening in the opening of the Central Buckeye league and moving to Ashville Saturday evening to meet the orange and black of the Harrison township crew.

First Game 8:30
The Friday evening show starts at 6:30 with underclassmen against eighth graders. A second preliminary is scheduled at 7:30 between reserve teams of the two Central Buckeye league teams, with the varsity crews going on at 8:30, or thereabouts.

The county schedule, topped by the Scioto-at-Perry fray, is impressive.

Scioto must win in the Atlanta handbox to remain ahead of Ashville and Pickaway township. Atlanta has been mighty tough on its own court and is certain to give the Commercial Point outfit a scrap.

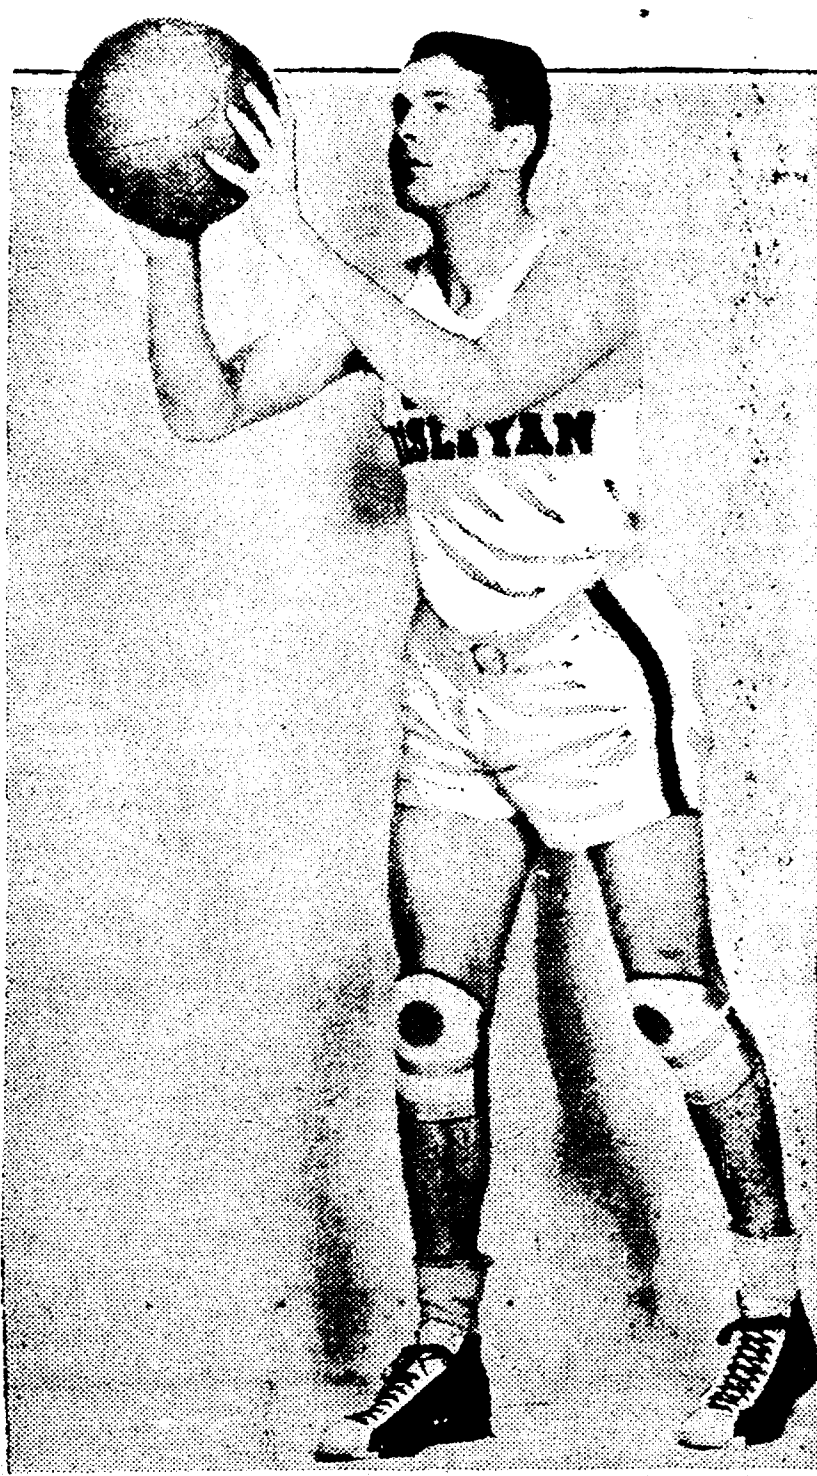

Other games in the county league are Salt Creek at New Holland, Washington at Williamsport, Ashville at Walnut, Muhlenberg at Pickaway, Monroe at Darby. Jackson is not booked in the county loop Friday, but will meet the alumni crew, boys and girls. An old man's game will be staged, too.

Grocers to Play
On Saturday evening, in addition to the Circleville-Ashville fray, county fans will be treated to an independent contest when the Williams Grocers, of Commercial Point, take on the Gahanna team in the Heart of Ohio league.

Darbyville and Stoutsville will play a preliminary.
The Grocer outfit is comprised of Cy Ferguson, Art Beatty, Ellisworth Trego, Mike Mileusnich, Bob Terhune, and several others. It has been turning out some good basketball and has been drawing good crowds.

Spain, mistress of half the world in early colonial days, met her downfall when she fought Holland, one of the smallest nations in Europe.

Stars for Bishops

JOHNNY MCADAMS — FORWARD

JOHNNY MCADAMS, a senior, is the key man on this winter's Ohio Wesleyan basketball team which may be a contender for the Buckeye conference title although it has lost a number of pre-season games. McAdams was a member of the Bishop team which won the conference title two years ago and which tied with Cincinnati for the crown last winter.

Ferguson Meets Bryant In C.A.C. Card Feature

The Pickaway county heavyweight boxing title will be at stake next Monday evening when Doc Ferguson, Circleville glove-swinger, meets Ralph Bryant, of New Holland, in the feature bout of the Circleville Athletic Club's card.

Ferguson won his title last year during the amateur tournament. Since then he has been working regularly and is in good shape for his contest with the New Hollander, who owns the Ross county heavyweight title.

Bryant issued a challenge to Ferguson. The contest will be over the 4-round route.

McDonald vs. Dolby

Other highlights of the evening's entertainment will include a grunt contest between Sandy

About This And That In Many Sports

Racing News Already

Spring must be in the air, because here comes the first publicity from the Indianapolis Speedway — It's from T. E. "Pop" Myers, who announces the silver anniversary of the 500-mile race this year. — Many lives have been lost in the 24 years the speedway has operated its long event; many millions of dollars have been spent; the contribution the gruelling race has made to the automotive industry cannot be counted in dollars and cents, and, Myers points out, "no breath of scandal has ever touched this great national spectacle and in no branch of entertainment has better sportsmanship been exhibited." ***

Reds Sell Thevenow

Cincinnati Reds are sure, apparently that Billy Myers is going to be okeh for the shortstop position next summer — They have sold Tommy Thevenow, veteran utility infielder, to the New York Giants. ***

Perry too Tough

Fred Perry, who recently left the role as Britain's greatest tennis player to win some money as a professional, started impressively Wednesday evening with a victory over Ellsworth Vines, star American pro, before 17,630 persons — Perry took the first match, 7-5, lost the second 3-6, won the third 6-3 and the fourth 6-4. — Vines was favored in betting before the contest started. ***

MILLER VICTOR IN HOT FIGHT WITH COVELLI

CINCINNATI, Jan. 7 — (UP) — Freddie Miller, Cincinnati, former world's featherweight boxing champion, today held a decision triumph over Frankie (Kid) Covelli, New York. He gained the victory on a split vote of judges after a bitterly fought 10-round battle.

Miller employed an effective left hook to take four of the first five rounds and pile up a commanding lead on points before Covelli was able to get started.

In the sixth, the New Yorker launched a savage attack to Miller's head and body.

Covelli had the former title holder in serious trouble in the eighth when a short right hook to the head stunned him. Freddie however, covered up and weathered the storm.

The bout was the first in the United States for Miller since last August and was the initial step in a campaign which he hopes will regain for him the championship title that was lost last May to Petey Sarron in a bout at Washington.

CARROLL WINS IN UPSET FROM RESERVE QUINT

COLUMBUS, Jan. 7 — (UP) — The most contented sports figure in Ohio today was Tom Connelly, the youthful and debonair Notre Dame graduate who has undertaken the task of rebuilding the shattered athletic fortunes of John Carroll university at Cleveland.

The dormat for other members of Cleveland's "Big Four" in recent season in all branches of sports, Carroll turned last night and delivered the biggest upset of the current basketball season when it downed a highly favored Western Reserve team 29 to 22.

To Connelly the victory over the Red Cats was particularly sweet, for during the past football season a high athletic official at Western Reserve suggested John Carroll be dropped from the "Big Four" unless it could furnish more opposition and prove a greater gate attraction.

COLLEY NAMED TO NEW OFFICE IN ASSOCIATION

COLUMBUS, Jan. 7 — (UP) — Creation of a press and radio bureau by the American Association and the appointment of Frank M. Colley, Columbus newspaperman, as its director was announced here today by President George Trautman.

Colley, for the past year, has served as secretary-treasurer of the Association's chapter of Baseball Writers of America.

"Recruited" Athletes Urged
KENT, O. (UP) — Kent State University's varsity club, composed of athletic monogram winners, is urging school officials "to forget the normal college days" and begin recruiting athletes who will "do more than win moral victories."

CONTRACT BRIDGE

GETTING AWAY WITH MURDER

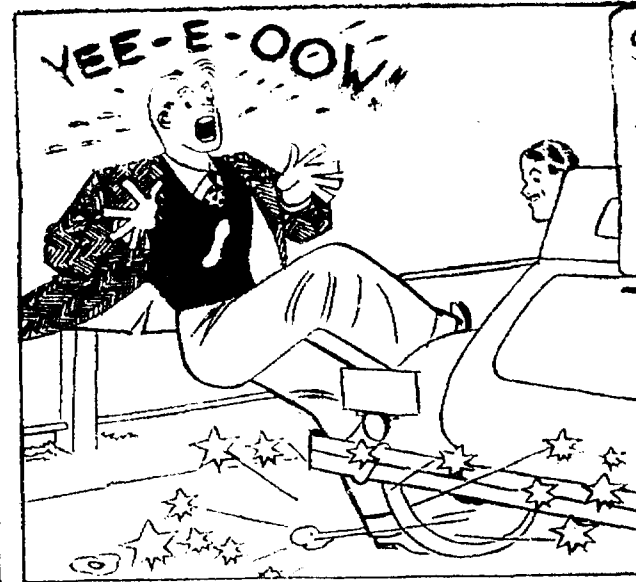

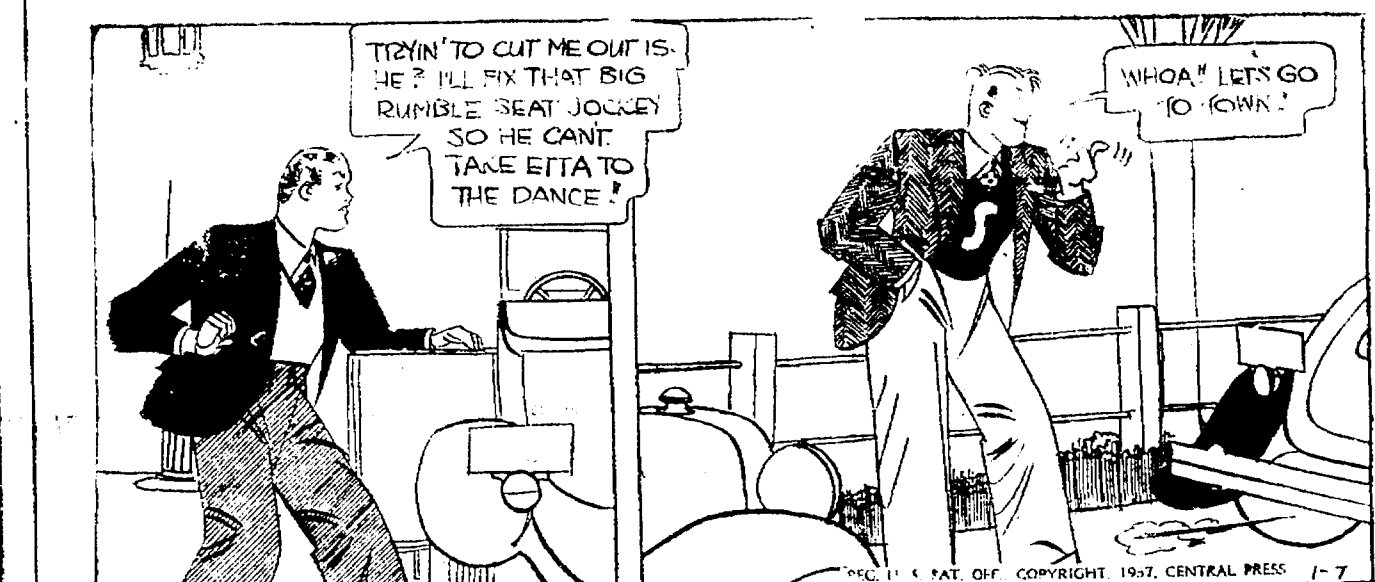

THERE IS a great deal to bridge aside from knowing all rules for bidding and play. Psychology at times plays a very important part in the game. At the time are well chosen for an attempt to put something over. As I have mentioned before, Avery J. Feiler is a fox at this sort of thing, sometimes putting over an almost unbelievable coup, as he did with the deal shown. He sat South. I am confident the other three players would not care to have their names mentioned.

Bidding went: West, 1-Heart; North, 2-Clubs; East, 2-Hearts; South, merely listened; West, passed, having said enough for a vulnerable player; North, not vulnerable, 3-Clubs, when he could have passed; East, doubled; South, 3-Spades, satisfied that the suit named was well divided, and, perhaps, hoping to hear more hearts bid; West, doubled, ending bidding. The opening lead was the K of hearts, naturally. One of dummy's diamonds was discarded. Declarer's Ace took the trick. Mr. Feiler took good care that declarer did not get in for awhile. Dummy's K and declarer's Ace of diamonds were taken in. That appeared safe. At the fourth trick dummy ruffed a low heart. The fifth and sixth tricks went to declarer, who ruffed a club and to dummy's ruff of a third round of hearts. Declarer ruffed another club. The question now arose whether it would be safer to lead a fourth round of hearts for dummy to ruff, or should a third round of diamonds be led, for dummy to ruff. Either would have been all right, but declarer decided that West's refusal to rebid hearts meant that he held only four cards of the suit, so that East still held a heart. The eighth trick consisted of a fourth round of hearts, ruffed with dummy's last spade. Now if clubs went around again declarer would be home. A third round of clubs was led. Declarer trumped with next to his last spade. Fortunately for South, both defenders had to follow suit, giving declarer his 3-Spades, doubled, for game. Of course the last four tricks had to be yielded to declarer's top diamond and Ace, K and Q of spades. Had defenders only known, three rounds of winning spades to start, followed by a heart lead, would have defeated the contract five tricks, as then South could have taken only one trump trick, his Ace and K of diamonds and the Ace of hearts. Three-Spades was a desperate call.

In addition to the regular institute program at Derby an exhibit of home and farm products will be displayed in the school auditorium. Officials of the Williamsport institute have announced several changes in the premium list for exhibits. Hybrid corn has been added to the corn section and nut bread and jam cake are additions to the cake division.

Topics Announced

Mrs. Focht's topics for the first day will be "Lincoln as an Inspiration to American Youth," "Why We Go Back to the Country," and "Houses or Homes." Mr. Stowe's topics for the second day are: "Blending Bells will Ring Tonight," and "Keeping Step with Business Progress."

Exhibits will be held in connection with the Ashville institute. Mrs. Martin Cronley is chairman of an amateur hour to be held on the first night. The second evening session will be devoted to the Scioto Valley Grange. A play will be presented.

CITY FIRE LOSS DURING YEAR SET AT LOW FIGURE

Chasing blackbirds, removing cats from telephone poles and unhooking doors for residents are a part of local firemen's work, so Chief Palmer Wise included these items in his annual report to council Wednesday night.

His report showed four cats were saved, two doors were unhooked for residents and two "shooting" expeditions were conducted.

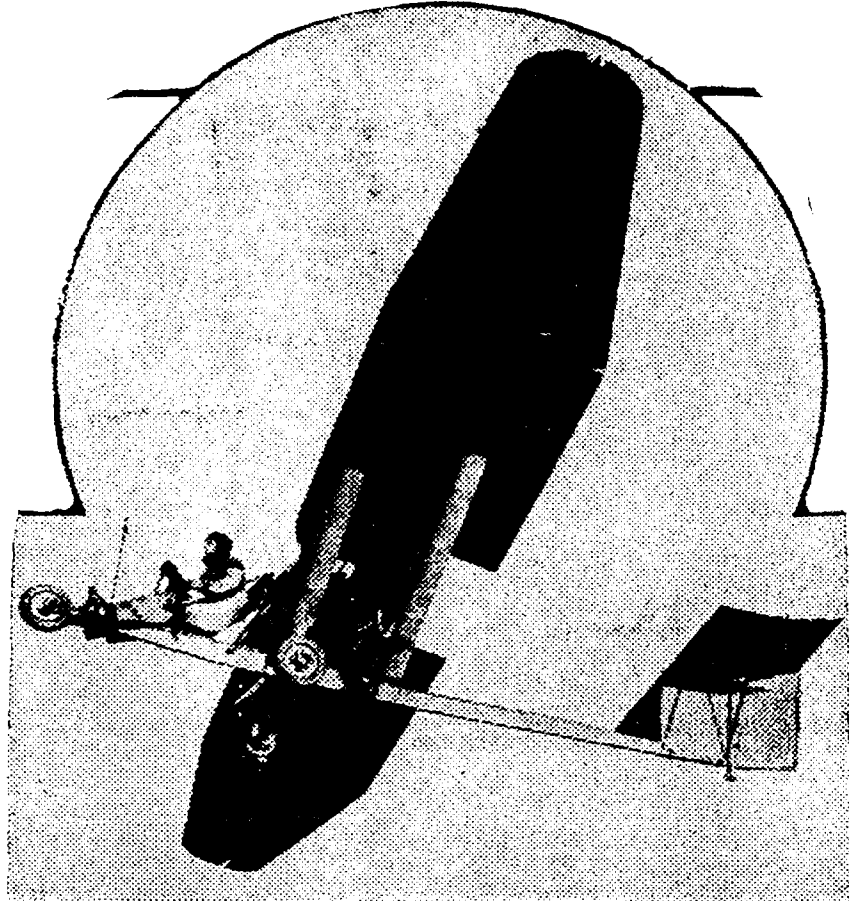

During the year the department had 89 calls of which 27 were auto fires, two were false alarms and 11 were out-of-town. Circleville's fire loss for the year was estimated at $485, an exceptionally low figure. The department used 120 gallons of gasoline and only four gallons of oil.

Last year the department had 65 calls with a loss of $1,090, the chief said.

BURKE SEEKING CONTRACT FOR TAKING GARBAGE

L. E. Burke, 134 Town street, submitted a bid to councilmen Wednesday night for the city garbage collection contract. His bid was $375 for collection from municipal buildings and 10 cents per trip in the residential districts and 25 cents per trip from business places for twice weekly trips. He agreed to collect garbage and rubbish, including tin cans, but not ashes. The bid was referred to the health committee.

THEATRES

AT THE CLIFTONA

All the power, nobility and lofty sentiment which made Barry Benefield's novel, "Valiant Is The Word For Carrie," a best seller live anew, aided by the magic touch of the motion picture camera and the sterling performances of a great cast, in the screen version of the novel which closes at the Cliftona Theatre tonight.

"Valiant Is The Word For Carrie" brings to the screen Gladys George famous stage actress, in the title role. She is supported by Arline Judge, John Howard, Dudley Digges, Harry Carey and Isabel Jewell. Miss George is a dramatic actress of exceptional ability and the mother role she creates in this film places her immediately among the great of filmdom.

"Valiant Is The Word For Carrie" is the story of a woman of shady reputation who longs for a family of her own. She adopts two waifs, played by Jackie Moran and Charlene Wyatt, and takes them to a distant city. Her struggle is a hard one but she rears them to glorious young manhood and womanhood. The adult roles of the children are played by Arline Judge and John Howard.

FARM LEADERS OF 4 COUNTIES HEAR REPORTS

CHILLICOTHE, Jan. 7.—Thirty-five representatives of Ross, Pickaway, Hocking and Fairfield Farm Bureaus attended a district meeting Tuesday morning and afternoon at Highland's restaurant. M. G. Steeley, Circleville, district speaker, discussing with the group the importance of a good county setup through active field work, the furtherance of educational and youth programs, duties of officers and directors, and the relationship between a strong membership and properly functioning service department. He called attention to the fact that the Verna Ellsinger Memorial Fund set up by the O. F. B., will offer a $400 scholarship award this year for the winner in a Farm Bureau essay contest.

After the luncheon, Harry Briggs, manager of the Pickaway Farm Bureau cooperative, told of the livestock marketing practice followed there so that the members realized greater profits from cattle by finishing them in such manner that dressing losses were reduced.

Gives Summary

E. J. Bath, legislative agent of the Ohio Farm Bureau, gave a complete summary of legislative work during the last year. He explained details of various laws which were pushed through under Farm Bureau sponsorship for the benefit of the farmers generally. He also discussed details of legislative matters, passage of which was blocked as a result of Farm Bureau opposition, the organization fighting the bills because the legislation would work hardships on agricultural sections. He discussed various kinds on the residents of the generally good and bad types of legislation, showing how the Farm Bureau legislative division considers pending legislation in the light of its effect on the farm population.

Reports were made on membership campaigns in the various counties of the district. Ross county reported that 90 members had already been signed in 1937 after only three days' work by the field agent, Roger Erwin.
